

To whom it may concern,

My name is Forrest Cameranesi, and I am interested in your open position.

I have extensive experience in diverse creative and technical fields including both web development and graphic design, and I am looking for opportunities to broaden and deepen those skills.

I am looking for a steady career where the skills and experience I already have are enough as they are from day one, and where there are opportunities to learn and grow more in the future.

I'm a very fast learner, drawing on my wide breadth of experience to get up to speed on new skills quickly. I also love to teach, to help others round out and polish up their skill sets.

Academic and cognitive aptitude tests consistently score me around the top 1%. Personality tests rank me highly on conscientiousness, openness, and agreeableness, and just slightly on the introverted side.

I'm happy to be wherever in an organizational structure I can best serve, whether that's learning from and supporting those more experienced than me, teaching and guiding those less experienced, or somewhere in the middle.

I thrive in a support role, helping others to achieve their goals. But I am also an ideas guy with high-level thoughts on ways to improve the overall process. I see leadership itself, done right, as a kind of a support role.

I work best independently when it comes to doing the actual work, but I love it when my work can be part of a larger team effort, or when I can bring together the products of other people's work.

I can turn around tasks I know how to do very quickly, and love to jump on new tasks as soon as they come in. But I also love any opportunity to spend much deep thought working out every last detail of a complex project to perfection.

I am equal parts abstract and practical, big-picture and detail-oriented, striving always to embody the best of both sides of every such dichotomy.

You can find both my resume and my portfolio online at <https://www.geekofalltrades.org/>.

Thank you very much for your consideration,
Forrest Cameranesi
